The continuing interest in Early American Art has been justified in the splendid examples in all lines of artistic endeavour which have come to light in the past twenty years.

A revelation to the present generation, is the superb portraits in oil, which have come down to us as a heritage, from a group of talented and sincere painters of Colonial, Revolutionary, and the earlier period of our undeveloped country.

The miniature painter, likewise, has left worthy and brilliant examples of his art, which was, also, practiced by many of the painters in oil. To Anne Hollingsworth Wharton is largely due the credit for the present attention given to American miniatures. Her "Heirlooms in Miniatures," is a guide, a handbook, and a friend to all having this fascinating phase of American Art in mind.

The small portrait in oil, however has, as yet, no sponsor. Practically, all our early painters made these small portraits from time to time, and some excelled in work of this size. A collection of these could be made to include examples of all the painters of note of the early period.

After the Revolutionary war, artists from France, Italy, Sweden and England, came to America to ply their vocation, and many excellent miniatures came down to us from these sources. Guided and influenced mainly by their English colleagues here, the American painters of miniatures have left to posterity a series of portraits unsurpassed by the best, of the period of any of the nationalities mentioned. It is true of the American miniatures, as it is of the oil portraits, that, not withstanding the influence, association, and training, the work is unmistakeably American in type and technique, and cannot be mistaken for English or French of the same period.

This disposition of these portraits through Mr. Henkels catalogue, and with its accompanying list of names of miniature painters identified with America, which will be included in the Special Edition may make a real addition to the history of the subject.

——— GRIMALDI

A noted English miniaturist who visited the United States about 1792, and returned to England about 1796.

35A George Washington. Signed.

Size 3 x 2½.

A beautiful and artistically painted miniature, portraying Washington in military uniform somewhat similar to the Trumbull type, it is in the original antique square black enameled frame, and it has been in the possession of the late Judge Craig Biddle for the last forty years, being much sought after by connoisseurs. It was during Grimaldi's visit to the United States, 1792-96, that he painted this portrait, and it is quite probable that Washington gave him a sitting for that purpose.

Estate of JAMES. P. SMITH

JAMES P. SMITH

A noted miniature painter who resided in Philadelphia. Was born about 1803; died in Philadelphia in 1888. Contemporary with Gilbert Stuart and Thomas Sully. He attained great proficiency in the art. The uncle of President Woodrow Wilson. Sully invariably sought his approval of portraits he painted before he let them leave his studio.

78 Charles Smith.

Size 2¾ x 2½.

The father of the artist. In morocco case.

79 Portrait of the Artist, by himself.

Size 1⅝ x 1⅝.

80 George Washington.

Size 2½ x 2.

After the portrait by Gilbert Stuart. A superb miniature, exhibiting the technique and composition of an experienced artist. In it he has carried Stuart's coloring and all his artistic effect. I doubt whether a more beautiful portrait of Washington could be had. It was painted in the early part of the last century and has been cherished by the family of the artist as one of his most effective masterpieces. It has a slight crack on the left margin, but it does not harm the portrait and can be easily repaired.

81 Charles Smith.

Size 2½ x 2¼.

Son of the artist and first cousin of President Woodrow Wilson.

82 Ada E. Hayden.

Size 2¾ x 2⅝.

Daughter of the artist and first cousin of President Woodrow Wilson. The artist has written on the mount "From Memory. Unfinished." Nevertheless it is a beautiful example.

83 Mary A. Smith.

Size 2¼ x 2.

This is the portrait of the daughter of the artist when she was a little girl. It is exquisitely painted and portrays a beautiful little child with low-neck dress. She was the first cousin of President Woodrow Wilson. In morocco case.

84 Mary A. Smith.

Size 3 x 2½.

The daughter of the artist and first cousin of President Woodrow Wilson. It portrays a beautiful little girl with auburn curls and low-neck dress., exquisitely painted. In morocco case.

85 Mary A. Smith, née Adams.

Size 1¼ x 1⅜.

The wife of the artist. Has written on the back "By Jas. P. Smith. Mary A. Smith, ne Adams." She was the aunt of President Woodrow Wilson.

86 James P. Smith, by himself.

Size 2¾ x 2¼.

This is a very clever portrait of himself and he has written on the back "One of my first attempts on ivory. Back ground very bad. J. P. S." The portrait, however, is excellently painted, but the back ground is very dark, too much so to please the critical eye of the painter.

87 Portrait of a Lady.

Size 2¾ x 2¼.

This is evidently a portrait of a beautiful Spanish lady with curls and low-neck dress. It is considered by the family to be one of the artist's masterpieces.

88 Portrait of a Lady, seated, Nursing a Child.

Size 2⅛ x 2.

This beautifully little painting will appeal to anybody who has a feeling for domesticity. In morocco case.

89 Napoleon Bonaparte.

Size 2⅝ x 2⅛.

This is a copy from the celebrated portrait by Horace Vernet. It depicts the great emperor of the French in military uniform, full face. Mr. Smith painted it obout 1835. The family have had many offers for it, but always refused to part with it.
From lot 78 to 89 are all on ivory.

90 Napoleon Bonaparte.

Size 3 x 2⅜.

An exquisite little pen and ink drawing, signed by the artist, and from which he painted the miniature (Lot 89). It is done in imitation of stipple engraving, and so beautifully executed that it takes a strong magnifying glass to convince one that it is not an engraving.

JACOB EICHOLZ

Was born shortly after the Declaration of Independence, 1776. He was brought up to the trade of a coppersmith, but always had a tendency toward painting, in which he was encouraged by his friends, and soon became popular as a portrait painter of great merit in Lancaster and Philadelphia, where he painted the portraits of many of the leading citizens.

91 James P. Smith.

Size 30½ x 25¼.

Life-size bust portrait in oil on canvas, signed on the back by the artist. "Painted by Jacob Eicholz 1835."

It is the portrait of Jas. P. Smith, the miniauturist, in the prime of his life, and one of the very best examples of Eicholz.

92 Original Pencil Drawing by James P. Smith, entitled "Bonum vinum laetificat cor hominus." Signed.

93 Original Pencil Drawing of a Dog's Head, by Jas. P. Smith.

LE GÉNERAL WASHINGTON

HENRY INMAN

Was born in Utica, N. Y., Oct. 20, 1801; died in New York City, Jan. 17, 1846. Pupil of Jno. W. Jarvis. At the age of 21 he opened his own studio in New York and soon acquired fame as a portrait painter.

97 William Inman.

Size 8 x 9½.

Father of the artist, and of Admiral Inman, in oil. Painted on panel with the inscription in the artist's handwriting, "Wm. Inman Senr by Henry Inman."

98 Caroline Inman.

Size 8½ x 11.

Daughter of the artist, in oil, with inscription on the back in the hand of the artist, "Caroline Inman by Henry Inman."

99 Portrait of a Gentleman.

Size 11 x 13.

In oil. This is one of the finest examples of this celebrated artist's work.

JOHN BEAUFAIN IRVING

Was born in Charleston, S. C., November 26, 1825; died in New York City, April 20, 1877. Pupil of Lentz. His portraits and paintings of historical subjects are noted for their spirited composition and richness of color.

100 Edgar Allan Poe. In oil.

Size 9 x 11.

The celebrated author of "The Raven."

J. B. LONGACRE

Was born in Delaware County, Pa., August 11, 1794; died in Philadelphia January 1, 1869. He was a noted engraver of portraits in line and stipple. Many of his portraits were in colors and drawn from life, and from these he made the engravings.

101 John Fanning Watson.

Size 5½ x 4¼.

The annalist of Philadelphia and New York. Signed "J. B. Longacre, Del ad vivum 1836." Original pencil drawing from life.

EDWARD GREENE MALBONE

Was born in Newport, R. I., in August, 1777; died in Savannah, Ga., May 7, 1807. He became one of the most famous miniaturists of his time, and in his art Malbone is admitted to be without a peer. His miniatures stand alone. Not only is this so of his native land, but equally true in comparison with the best foreign work.

102 Portrait of Himself.

Size 10 x 13.

A beautifully painted portrait ot this well known artist, by himself. It formerly belonged to Col. Frank M. Etting, who exhibited it at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, in 1877. It was purchased from his estate.

BENJAMIN A. MEREDITH

Born 1790. Son of Benjamin Meredith.

103 Water Color Portrait of a Gentleman.

Size 3½ x 4½.

SAMUEL FINLEY BREESE MORSE

Was born in Charlestown, Mass., April 27, 1791; died in New York City April 2, 1872. Studied under Washington Allston and Benjamin West. He settled in Boston, where he soon gained a reputation for portrait painting, although he is better known as the inventor of the telegraph.

104 Portrait of Himself.

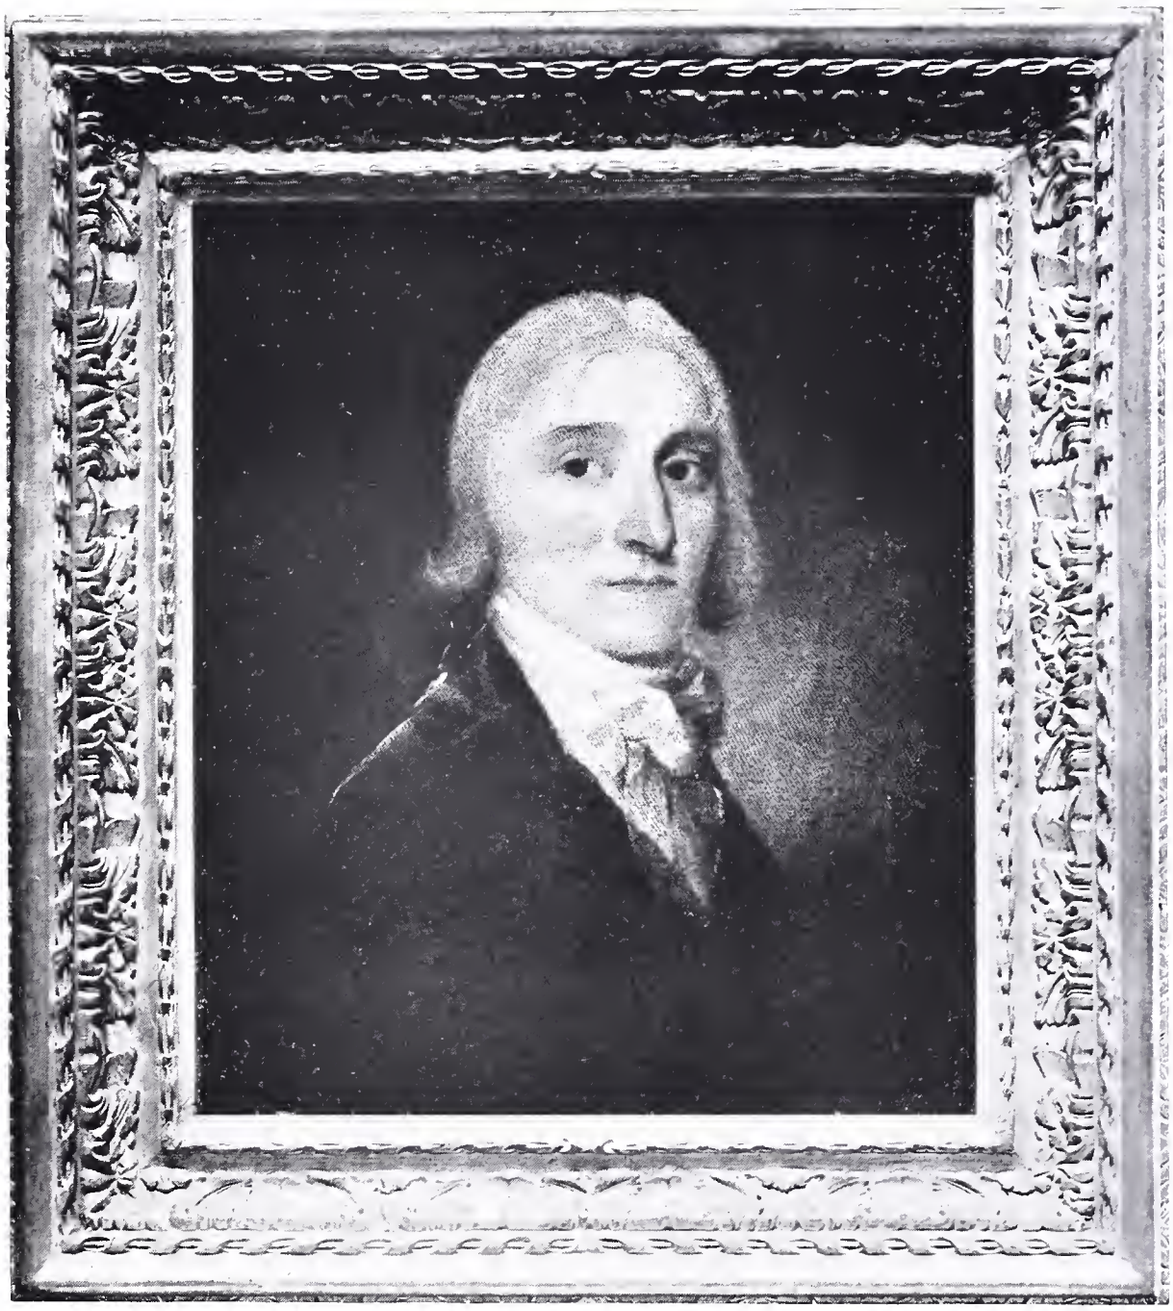
Size 9½ x 11½.

Professor Morse painted this portrait in 1814, when he was twenty-three years old. The portrait has been in the possession of the family of the former owners 106 years. Used as a frontispiece of Vol. I of the Life of Morse.



JOHN NAEGLE

Was born in Boston, Mass., November 4, 1796: died in Philadelphia September 17, 1865. Studied under Bass Otis, married the step-daughter of Thos. Sully. He painted the portrait of Gilbert Stuart, and as a portrait painter he ranks second to Stuart.

105 George Catlin.

Size 5 x 6.

Original sketch in oil, from life, of the celebrated artist and writer on North American Indians. Presented to James P. Smith, the miniaturist, by John Naegle.

PACIFICUS ORD

106 General Peter V. Hagner.

Size 5 x 4.

Water color. Signed "Ord pinxit," about 1845. Peter V. Hagner was a distinguished officer in the War with Mexico, and was a Brig.-General in the Civil War.

ANNA C. PEALE

107 Portrait of Rev. W. M. Stoughton, D. D.

Size 9 x 11½.

Dr. Stoughton was the first President of Columbia College, Washington, D. C. He was the first husband of Anna Claypoole Peale, and she was his second wife.

CHARLES WILLSON PEALE

Was born in Chestertown, Md., April 13, 1841; died in Philadelphia February 22, 1827. Studied under John S. Copley and Benjamin West. He became one of the most popular of portrait painters, and enjoyed the reputation of painting the first portrait of Washington.

108 John Bartram.

Size 13 x 10.

The inscription on the back reads: "Portrait of John Bartram of Darby, died 1777. C. W. Peale, Artist. Property of Isaac Bartram, 1795." An exceedingly rare and splendid example of this artist's work, and the first that has come under my notice of this size.

John Bartram was one of our first and most noted botanists. He was born near Darby, Pa., March 23, 1699; died in Kingsessing, Pa., September 22, 1777. In applying his vocation he made various trips through unexplored America, and contributed much valuable information on the natural history as well as the botany of his native country.

N. PIEHLE

109 George Washington.

Size 10 x 13.

In oil. Inscription on the base, "Le Général Washington. Peint d'après nature à Philadelphie, par N. Piehle, en 1783."

This portrait was specially painted for the engraving in Lavater's Physiognomy. This is doubtless a copy from one of the Charles Willson Peale portraits of Washington in France at that period, and the name "Piehle" is a French spelling of "Peale."

PETER F. ROTHERMEL

Was born in Nescopaek, Luzerne Co., Pa., July 18, 1817; died in Philadelphia ————————. A pupil of Bass Otis. Resided in Philadelphia, where he attained a high reputation for his coloring and composition. He painted many historical subjects.

110 Rose Bradmardine.

Size 8 x 10.

Original sketch in oil. Inscribed on the back, "Rose Bradmardine, Waverly, Walter Scott, by P. F. Rothermel, 1877."

ST. MEMIN

111 Portraits—Mr. and Mrs. Macdonald, of Maryland.

Size 9½ x 11½.

A pair of superb pastels. They are so beautifully executed and so definitely like the works of St. Memin, that I have attributed them to his hand.

JAMES SHARPLESS

Was born in England about 1751; died in New York February 26, 1811. He was noted for his exeellent series of small portraits in pastel of noted Americans, ineluding Washington, Jefferson, Adams, Monroe and others. He exeelled in the art.

112 Portrait of General Lafayette.

Size 8 x 10.

Original pastel from life.

113 James McClurg.

Was born in Hampton, Va., in 1747; died in Riehmond July 9, 1825. Noted physician and Revolutionary patriot. Member of the Federal Constitutional Convention.

Original pastel from life.

114 Portrait from Life (probably John Mason).

Size 8 x 10.

Original pastel.

GILBERT STUART

Was born in Narragansett, R. I., December 3, 1775; died in Boston, Mass., July 27, 1828. Studied under Benj. West, when he returned to the United States and became the greatest American portrait painter of his time and influenced all his contemporaries. He painted nearly all the prominent Americans of his time, his most distinguished sitter being George Washington.

115 Portrait of Hall Harrison.

Size 11 x 13.

Hall Harrisson's grandfather was born in Appleby, Westmoreland County, England. His father, John Harrisson, came to Easton Falls, Maryland, and was an officer in the Revolutionary War, from Cambridge, Maryland. At his death, his widow (Paul Harrisson's mother), married Judge Commett Bullitt. The Harrisson portrait went down to his mother's end of the family, remaining in the old homestead on Harrisson Street (named after him) and Dover Street, which was built over one hundred years ago. There is mention of the portrait in Volume X, page 376, of the Maryland Historical Society Report, which speaks of the inscription on the back. He went to visit his relatives in Appleby, England. In 1802 he was connected with the bank in Easton. Two years later he began business in Baltimore. The business was very successful, and was continued after his death by his son, who was President of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad in 1856. His great-great-grandchildren are: Mrs. George Harrisson Jackson and Mrs. Stuart Symington. The portrait of Paul Harrisson has never been out of the possession of the family. This is the only known portrait of this size by Gilbert Stuart.

116 George Washington.

Size 15 x 13.

On the back is inscribed "Painted for Charles R. Ingersoll. Gilbert Stuart." This painting, which is about one-third life-size, was cleaned by the late Mr. Wilkinson, the well-known restorer, who informed the owner that there was not the slightest doubt but that it was painted by Gilbert Stuart. It is on paper, mounted on heavy linen, and the inscription as originally written, is on the back. It is really a beautiful portrait and worth the close attention of connoisseurs.

116A Stuart, Gilbert. America's Master Portrait Painter. A. L. S. 3 pages, 4to. Washington, May 15, 1804. To Edward Stow, with address. Stained and damaged on outer margin.

This is the second letter of Stuart's that has come under my observation in fifty years. EXCESSIVELY RARE.

"I received yours of the first of May. I did not answer it, because I am unwilling to give you the trouble and expense of an idle letter; allow me now however to express my warmest thanks for the prompt and kind manner with which you performed my request.

Enclosed I send you a hundred dollars and tomorrow I shall enclose a hundred more and the day after another hundred. The note to Franks is 216. Do with interest the debt to Messrs. Boller & Jordan * * * so that this sum is more than sufficient for these debts—as I must insist on the deducting one hundred dollars which is the price of the head of Washington which has been spoiled by Franks making a hole through it. Should any difficulty arise on this subject, Mrs. Dallas or Mr. Hopkinson will I am certain give you their advice cheerfully on my account. I must beg of you to make my best thanks to Messrs. Boller & Jordan for their kind indulgence to me, until I can have an opportunity myself to do it personally.

Nothing could have given us more surprise and concern than to find that any censure should reach so sincere and disinterested a Friend as I have on all occasions found you; but I feel the utmost indignation that there should be found a being so base and so impudent as to attack the character of my Friend in the most tender point; and to make one an instrument for such a purpose. Truth my dear Friend is simple but powerful; and I know no way to repel so infamous an attack; as by stating it.

First then—I never did (until the present moment) direct to you or to your care any letters containing money for the use of my family nor for any other purpose. I never had and I trust I never shall have any other reason for not doing so, than an unwillingness to give you trouble that these were three letters of which obtained no account for many weeks containing money, forty (?) dollars each, they were directed to Mrs. Stuart at Bordenton but they never reached the Post office which is about two miles from my lodging. The weather being severe the idle rascal who I had entrusted them with had concealed them in his own box. Thus Sir I hope I have removed entirely every thing that could give either of us uneasiness and beg permission to subscribe myself with unshaken esteem and affection, Your most obliged."

THOMAS SULLY

117 George Frederick Cook.

GEORGE WILCOX

130 Matthew Baldwin.
Size 11 x 17.

WASHINGTON RELICS

From the Estate of Dr. David Stuart, the Personal Friend of General Washington, who Remembered him in his Will.

CHARLES WILLSON PEALE

Was born at Chestertown, Maryland, April 16, 1741; died in Philadelphia February 22, 1827. Studied under John Singleton Copley and Benjamin West. Attained a high reputation as a miniaturist and painter of portraits in oil. Enjoyed the distinction of having painted the first portrait of Washington.

131 George Washington.

Size 1 11-16 x 1 6-16.

On ivory, in the original gold frame, as a locket or breastpin. In the original morocco case.

The portrait represents Washington in uniform, with the blue silk band of the "Cincinnati" across the breast; the head is slightly to the left. Shortly after the termination of the Revolutionary War Mrs. Martha Washington deputised Charles Willson Peale to paint the portrait of General Washington for a locket she wished to present to her very dear friend, the daughter of Dr. David Stuart. Peale accordingly visited Mount Vernon for that purpose, and Washington gave him a sitting (Tradition says that he sat on a small wooden box while Peale made the sketch), and this portrait is the result. A more beautiful relic of this GREATEST OF MEN could not be had, as it carries with it the close personality of the general and that of his beloved wife Martha, as well as being a gift from both to their lovely and gifted young friend, the daughter of their old friend Dr. David Stuart.

The family history of the portrait is, that the miniature was painted at the request of Martha Washington for the daughter of Dr. David Stuart, Rosalie Eugenia Stuart. Dr. David Stuart was the lifelong friend of Washington and married the widow of Mrs. Washington's son, John Parke Custis. She was Eleanor Calvert before her marriage to John Parke Custis. Her daughter, Rosalie Eugenia Stuart, married a Mr. Webster, and she gave the miniature to her nephew, Sholto Tuberville Stuart, who gave it to his wife, bearing the same name, Rosalie Eugene Stuart. Dr. David Stuart was the great-grandfather of the present owner, Mrs. Caroline Calvert Davis Stuart. An affidavit as to the above facts will be given the purchaser.

WASHINGTON'S FIELD GLASS OR TELESCOPE

132 Brass Field-Glass or Telescope. Made by Whitford of London, with three adjustable brass feet for sitting on a table or stand. In the original mahogany case.

This interesting relic was used by General Washington in surveying land. It has a screw in the bottom, to which a tripod can be adjusted for field work. It is fair to presume that Washington used this identical instrument when a young man in making surveys for Lord Fairfax, his patron and friend, and it was with this instrument he surveyed his Mount Vernon estate. At his death, the general bequeathed it to his friend, Dr. David Stuart, and it has engraved upon it this clause from Washington's will: "To Dr. David Stuart I give my Telescope. Ext. Washington's will." This is no doubt one of the most interesting relics of this great man in existence, as it is associated with him in his early life, when he little thought he would be called upon to render the service to his country which made him the greatest man in history. It has come down by direct inheritance from the estate of Dr. David Stuart to the present owner, Mr. George Calvert Stuart of Virginia. An affidavit as to the above facts will be given the purchaser.

WASHINGTON'S POCKET SHAVING CASE

133 A Pocket Shaving Case, consisting of two razors, hone, strop, brush, comb and mirror, in a morocco case, showing considerable wear-and-tear.

This shaving case was used by Genl. Washington during the Revolutionary war. It was always carried by him from camp to camp, and rendered him service at Trenton, Princeton, Valley Forge, Yorktown, and all the other important places he visited during his military life. It shows considerable wear from much usage. It was bequeathed by the General to his old and dear friend Dr. David Stuart, who has written on a piece of paper attached to the case the following: "This camp shaving case was used through the War of Independence by Washington, as General-in-Chief of America (U. S. A.) 1776, and given to his connection, Dr. David Stuart of Virginia, as he had used it, preserved with sacred care from age to age as a relic of the great and good, the Father of his Country." It was inherited in direct descent from the estate of Dr. David Stuart by the present owner, Richard Henry Stuart of Virginia, who has also written on a piece of paper attached: "This shaving case was uesd by Genl. Washington during the Revolutionary war, 1776, given by him to his friend & connection, Dr. David Stuart of Virginia, & now owned by his Great Grandson, Richard Henry Stuart, Jr., of Virginia." An affidavit as to the above fact will be given the purchaser.

TWO MOUNT VERNON WASHINGTON CHAIRS

134 Two Mahogany Chippendale Chairs. The top rail is neatly carved, as also the ends. The splats are plain open work, cabriole legs, terminating in bird's claw and ball feet, with removable seats, upholstered in modern blue silk brocatelle.

These are two of eight chairs which General Washington had in his dining-room at Mount Vernon. They were brought from Mount Vernon by Mrs. Abigail McLean, of Wilmington, Delaware, before the Civil war, and before the regents, now in charge of the Mount Vernon property, took charge of it. Miss McLean purchased the whole of the eight chairs, four of which she parted with to her grandfather, Daniel Lammot. An affidavit as to the above fact will be given the purchaser. It is seldom an opportunity is offered to purchase furniture which belonged to Washington, and especially which was used at Mount Vernon, and besides this they are extra fine specimens of the Chippendale period.

ENGRAVED PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON
